Referentin und Referenten

Silvia Minardi is an English teacher in Magenta's Liceo Classico „Salvatore Quasimodo“ and the president of the association Lingua e Nuova Didattica. She has been implementing European projects since 2003 and has been working as a teacher trainer for the Italian Ministry of Education since 1995. Silvia Minardi is the author of several articles and publications on language teaching and didactics.

Mark Almond is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English and Language Studies at Christ Church University, Canterbury, where he directs CELTA courses and teaches on various Under-graduate and Post-graduate Diploma and MATESOL programmes. His main areas of interest are in teacher identity, the use of drama in the language classroom and performance skills for effective and affective teaching.

Alan Maley has been involved with ELT for 45 years, working in ten countries, including China and India. He worked in Milan for the British Council (1970 – 74) and as Director-General of the Bell Educational Trust in Cambridge. Alan Maley is a freelance writer and consultant, and Visiting Professor at Leeds Metropolitan University. He has published over forty books and written numerous journal articles. His interests include creative approaches to teaching language, extensive reading, creative writing, literature and materials development.
